

Mexico can export sweet limes to the U.S., the U.S. government announced.

The fruit must be irradiated and inspected for pests and fungus before entry, according to a statement from the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. The sweet limes are available only for commercial consignment and must have a certificate of inspection.

Source: www.freshfruitportal.com